Police Plan Talks With Mrs. Powers

Washington homicide detectives plan to interview Mrs. Barbara Powers, who is reported recovering rapidly after being hospitalized Friday in an unconscious condition.

A Georgetown University Hospital official said that Mrs. Powers, wife of Francis Gary Powers, U-2 pilot, is now in satisfactory condition, but will remain in the hospital for another day or two to receive further diagnostic tests.

When Mrs. Powers was first taken to the hospital, Police Lt. Nelson Rickey of the seventh precinct said, investigating officers were told she was being treated for an overdose of approximately 28 nembutal tablets, a barbiturate drug. This report was recorded at the precinct.

However, hospital officials said she was suffering from an "acute gastrointestinal upset." Mrs. Powers' condition was described as "very serious" when she was admitted.

Since Mr. Powers was released from a Russian prison last February, the couple has been living at Hunting Towers in Alexandria. Mr. Powers has resumed duties with the Central Intelligence Agency.
